

Wheelock Bandstand

The Carlisle Indian Industrial School was created to prepare Native American students for life in American society through a curriculum focused on mastered English, vocational courses, and academic subjects. Extracurricular activities were used to develop students' talent and social skills. The considerable talent of the schools athletes and band was then used to promote the school's causes around the country. The band was invited to play presidential inaugurations and the 1892 Chicago World Fair. Celebrated composer Dennison Wheelock, who attended the school in 1890, became its first Indian Bandmaster. The modern bandstand, erected in 1980, and located on the parade ground was named in honor of him. Today, the bandstand hosts USWC graduations and Change of Command ceremonies.

Thorpe Hall

This structure was built in 1887, by the Indian School students, using bricks made at the school, and funded by money raised by the friends of the institution. The building was created for use as a physical fitness center, and is still used in this capacity today. It is named for one of America's most famous athletes, Jim Thorpe, who attended the Indian School from 1904-09 and 1911-13. Thorpe, a great football player under Pop Warner, was also a decorated Olympian who won gold medals in the Pentathlon and decathlon, before going on to a successful professional baseball career.

8

Upton Hall

Constructed in 1941, Upton Hall could be considered one of Carlisle Barracks newer buildings. Called Hoff Hall originally, it was used as the Medical School campus until it moved to Fort Sam Houston in 1946. Over the next five years, the building served the schools for Defense Education, Military Police, Adjutant General, Chaplain Corps, Army Intelligence, Civilian Affairs, and finally the Army War College. Once the USAWC relocated to its new facilities in Root Hall, the building was rechristened Upton Hall and is now home to the US Army Garrison and the Peacekeeping and Stability Operations Institute.

7

The Grandstand

The original grandstand was built in 1902, on Indian Field, where sports greats Jim Thorpe, Luis Tewanima, and Charles Bender trained and competed with their Indian Industrial School sports teams. In 1940 the current structure was built on the same site, and is primarily used by USAWC students to watch their children's games.

6

Coren Apartments

Since its original construction in 1838 during the Calvary School era, the Coren Apartment has burned down twice, in an accident in 1857 and by Calvary men in 1863. Each time it was rebuilt in a year. Named after Capt. Isaac the first Artillery School, the building has a long history of housing the teachers of the installation's schools. This tradition continues to today, as it is the houses of USAWC staff and faculty.

10

Frederick the Great

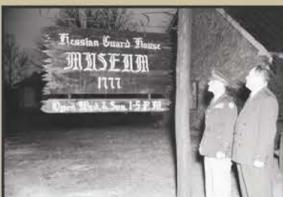

Frederick the Great was King of Prussia from 1740-1786. In 1785, he signed a Treaty with the United States, known as the Treaty of Amity and Commerce, which recognized the independence of the United States from British rule. This statue was presented as a gift to the United States in 1904 from King Kaiser Wilhelm II of Prussia. It was enshrined at The Army War College, because of Frederick's renowned reputation for brilliant military strategy and War campaigns.

11

Hessian Powder Magazine Museum

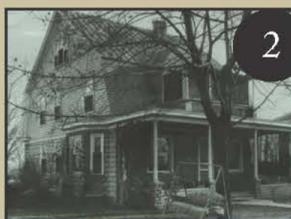

Hessian Prisoners of War built this structure in 1777, after Washington captured them at the Battle of Trenton. With 4 1/2 feet thick walls and a stone exterior, The Hessian Powder Room began as a storage facility for sulfur, brimstone, ammunitions and other explosive material for use during the revolutionary war. Over the years it has been used as a Calvary guardhouse, Indian school detention center, medical confinement quarters, and post office. Finally, in 1948 it was converted into a museum celebrating the barracks rich history as the second oldest military post.

1

Pratt Hall

The one-story structure was built in 1908, for use as doctors' quarters for the Carlisle Indian Industrial School, and is named after Brig. Gen. Richard Pratt, its founder. The dwelling, which has been repurposed as an Army lodging unit, has since been transformed in the two-story building that it is today.

2

Quarters 3

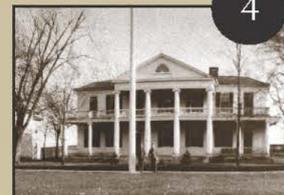

Quarters 3 was constructed in 1891 as a vocational project by Indian School students, under the direction of Carlisle Contractor Andrew Wetzel. The building served as administrative headquarters for the school until its closure on September 1, 1918. It was later remodeled and has been converted into family housing.

3

Quarters 2

Quarters 2 was originally constructed in 1821 on the site where the headquarters of Col. John Stanwix, who established the original post during the French and Indian War, once stood. It was used as military officers quarters until Confederates burned it to the ground in 1863. However, by 1864 it had been rebuilt on a grander scale, with 10 rooms, two wings, and a large porch. From 1879-1904 it was the home of Brig. Gen. Richard H. Pratt, founder and superintendent of the Carlisle Indian Industrial School.

4

Washington Hall

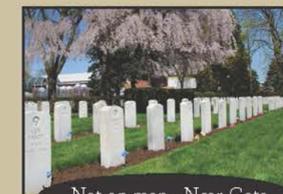

Built in 1884, Washington Hall began as a hospital for the Indian School, and later became the dormitory and dining hall for its great athletics department under the famed football coach, Glen Scobey "Pop" Warner. The building is named after President George Washington, who led two expeditions from Carlisle Barracks during the French and Indian War and The Whiskey Rebellion. Today Washington Hall is one of three Army Lodging Facilities on post.

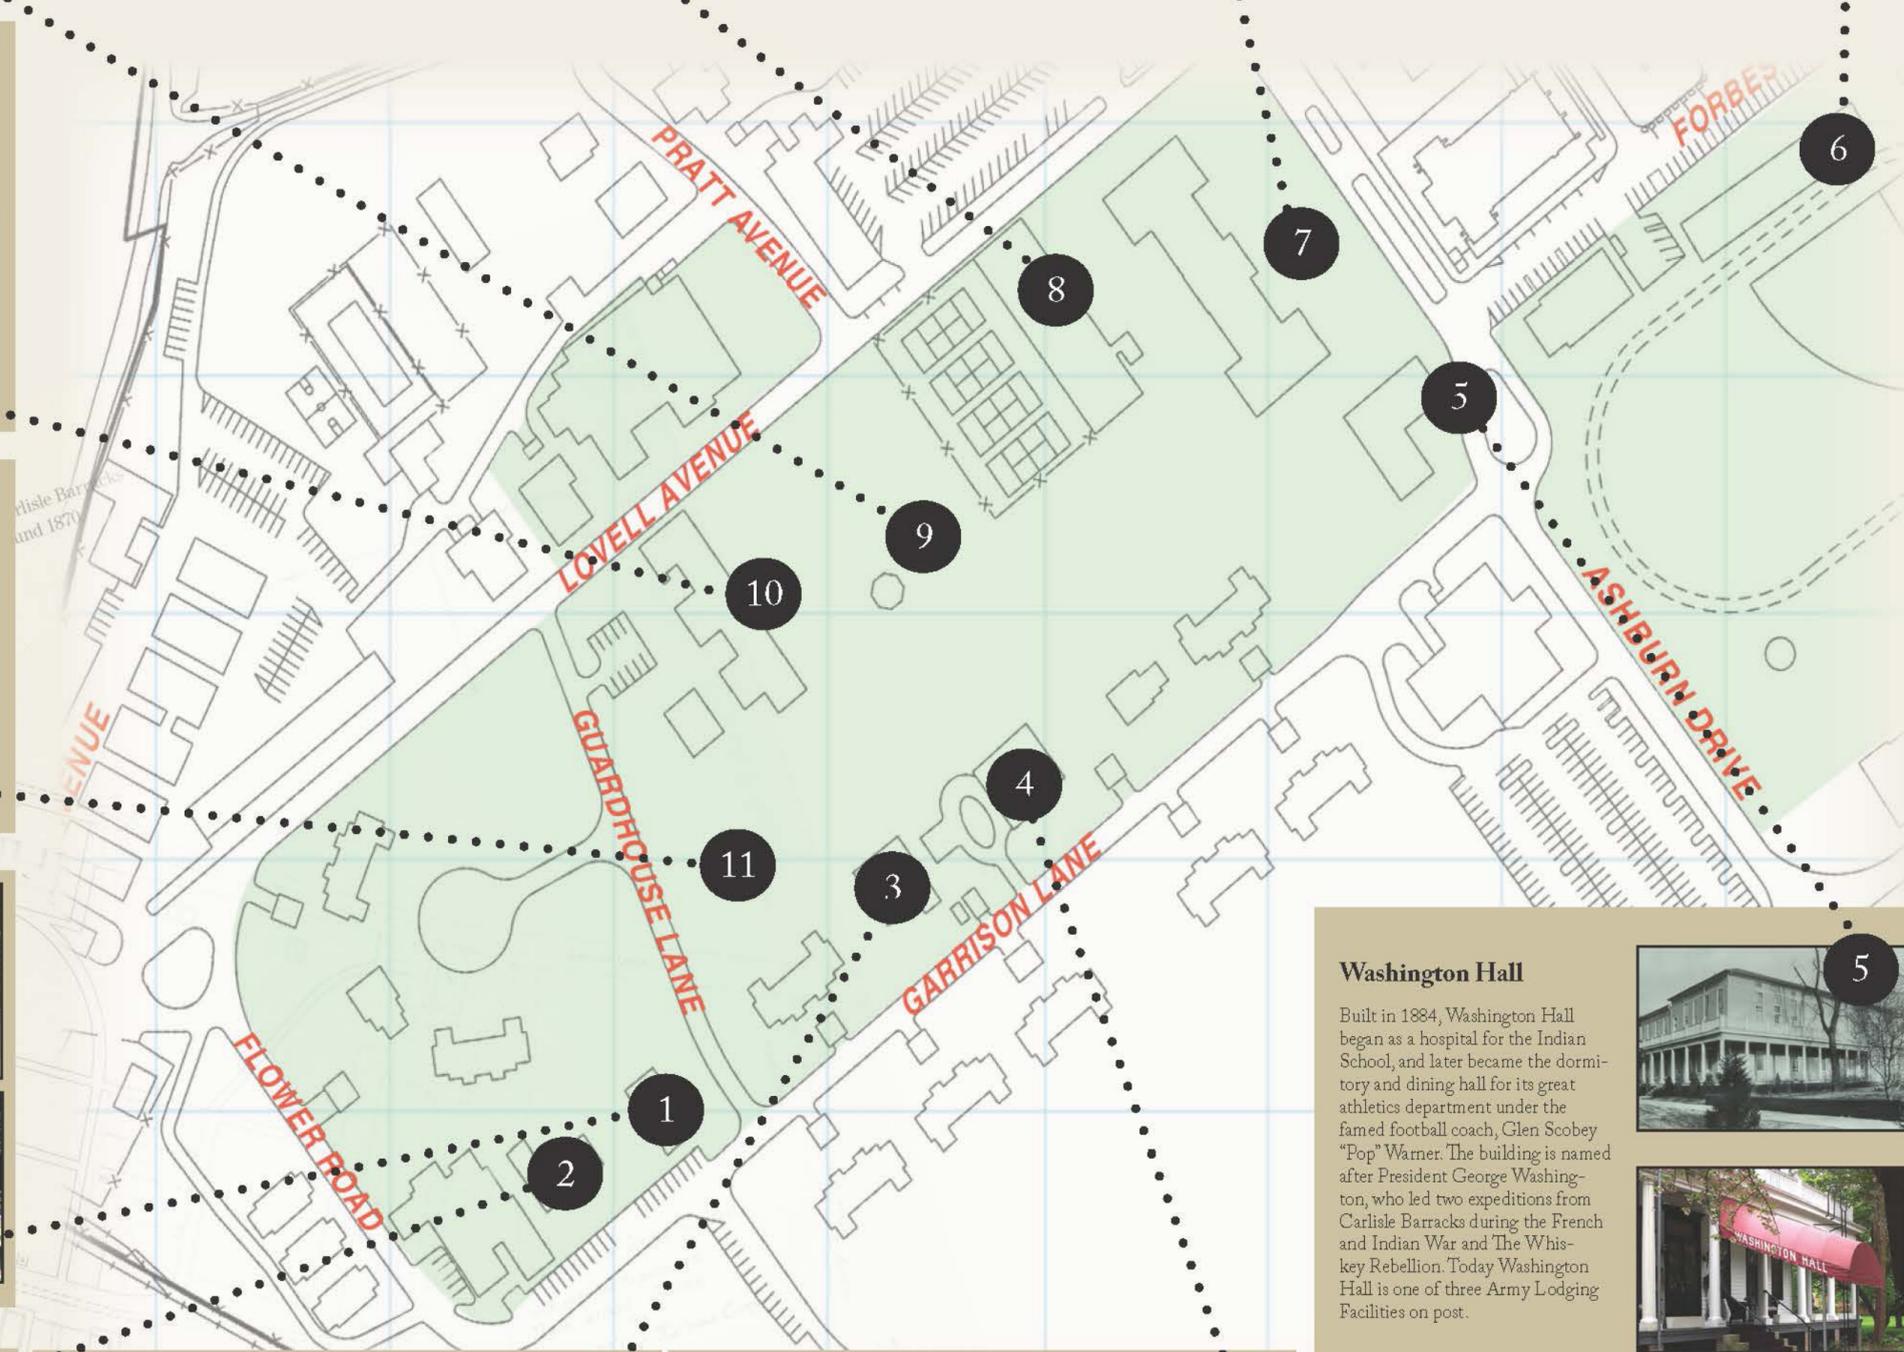

5

Indian Industrial School Cemetery

The Carlisle Indian Industrial School operated from 1879-1918. During that time, many children died, most from common diseases such as smallpox. Efforts were made to return sick children to their families; however, those suffering from contagious diseases such as tuberculosis remained in confinement at the school and were buried in the cemetery for containment purposes. More than 175 Indian children were buried in the cemetery and their graves are maintained on the barracks grounds.
